

TOWNS TERRORIZED BY INCENDIARISM

Threatening Letters Add to Excitement in Villages.

ONE SUSPECT IS ARRESTED

Residents of Davy and Hallsville, McDowell County, W. Va., in Fear. G. C. Smith, a Volunteer, Killed, Being Mistaken for an Outlaw. T. M. Hall Held in $5,000 Bail.

Special to The Washington Herald. Roanoke, Va., July 27.—Since the night of July 14, when the first fire occurred, the people of Davy and Hallsville, McDowell County, W. Va., have lived in terror, hourly expecting the towns to be burned, as threatening letters have been received and the community thrown into intense excitement.

Last week G. C. Smith, one of the men volunteering to stand guard, was mistaken for one of the outlaws and killed, thus adding to the misfortune of the community. With things in this state of anxiety, efforts to capture the party terrorizing the towns have been made and last night T. M. Hall was arrested. Detective D. T. Peters, of the State Agency, worked the case up. On Saturday night he received re-enforcements in James O'Connor, of Brumwell, and W. W. Phaul, of North Fork.

The three men kept watch all Saturday night, Sunday, and Sunday night, thus adding to the misfortune of the community. They took him before Squire Green-Traut, and on Hall's plea that he was not ready for trial, the case was set for tomorrow.

Bail was fixed at $5,000, but Hall could not give it, and is in jail. The evidence against him is said to be quite conclusive, although it is circumstantial.

Hall is a son of Mrs. Hannah Hall, who at one time owned all of the land where the towns of Davy and Hallsville now stand.

PROF. SOLLERS IS DEAD.

Well-known Educator and Historian Victim of Heart Trouble.

Baltimore, Md., July 27.—Prof. Basil Sollers, aged sixty-six, principal of Group B, of the Baltimore public schools, widely known as a historian and a lecturer upon early Maryland events, died of neuralgia of the heart to-day at his home, 633 North Carey street.

Prof. Sollers was taken ill on Friday, and yesterday he seemed to be much better, so that none of his family thought his condition was serious. Even as late as noon to-day it was not thought he was very ill, but shortly after he had a neuralgic attack, from which he did not rally.

Born in Baltimore County, he was a son of Basil Sollers and a grandson of Thomas Sollers, who was the first collector of the port of Baltimore, and he came of distinguished family. In 1900 he married Miss Lucy Ford, sister of Charles E. Ford and daughter of the late John T. Ford.

Besides his wife, he is survived by three children—Basil, John, and Goodwin Sollers.

STOLEN DIAMONDS SOLD.

Wheeling Men Held at Parkersburg for Receiving the Gems.

Special to The Washington Herald. Parkersburg, W. Va., July 27.—After a hearing abounding in sensationalism, Louis P. Frebe, of Wheeling, and Carl Howard, alias "Mysterious Kid," of the same city, were held to answer before the grand jury, the former for receiving stolen property, the latter for aiding Frank Beckley, of Parkersburg, in selling $2,000 worth of diamonds stolen from the residence of J. M. Jackson.

The diamonds were sold to Frebe for $200. Both gave bond for their appearance. Frebe is a salaried keeper, and a power in Ohio County politics.

GAMBLERS DRIVEN OUT.

Turf Exchange Near Pennsylvania Line Forced to Close.

Special to The Washington Herald. Charleston, W. Va., July 27.—That the turf exchange gamblers have abandoned their operations at Virginia Station, in Brooke County, just across the State line from Pennsylvania, is the report just received at the governor's office. Following a decision by the Supreme Court that they could not be stopped by injunction, the exchange was again started up. Gov. Glascock ordered the prosecuting attorney of Brooke County to proceed against them by indictment, with the result that they moved out.

ARTIFICIAL LEG FOR COW.

Garrett County Men Help Poor Bossy Get About.

Special to The Washington Herald. Cumberland, Md., July 27.—Jeremiah Hunter and Solomon Lancaster, of Somerset, near Garrett, amputated a cow's leg recently and made her a wooden leg. The cow's leg was so injured that it was thought she would have to be killed, but she moves about all right now.

Railway Company Organized.

Special to The Washington Herald. Staunton, Va., July 27.—With the view of constructing a railway line in Augusta from Mount Solon to Millboro, a company was organized here to-day, with Jacob Yost, Staunton, president; Sidney Blackman, Warren, secretary; C. E. Bryan and W. C. Craig, Staunton, managers. Work on the road, which will extend forty miles into the Deerfield section, will begin this fall. It is principally for the development of timber lands in Augusta County.

Blind Tigers Are Raided.

Special to The Washington Herald. Danville, Va., July 27.—The police to-day raided three alleged blind tigers, seizing a quantity of corn whiskey, and arrested five negroes, three men and two women, on the charge of selling whiskey without a license. All of the accused liquor vendors went to jail in default of bond, and will be tried this week in the mayor's court.

Johnson pitched good two out of four. Johnson struck out five and giving but one pass. Bollinger, of Chambersburg, had two strike-outs and gave six passes. Chambersburg made two double plays.

SENATOR STONE IN HANDS OF POLICE

asked quietly that he be allowed to communicate with Senator Rayner, Representative Gill, and several other personal friends. He then informed the officers that they had no right to arrest him, anyway, but as he supposed they were ignorant of that fact he would bear no ill-feeling toward them.

The Senator was given all the conveniences and comforts at hand, and special men were set to work to find some friend who could help the Missourian out of his predicament.

Rayner Not at Home.

Senator Rayner was not at home, neither was Representative Gill, but Police Commissioner Whittle was finally located, and he hurried to the aid of the Senator. He soon informed the lieutenant in charge that a United States Senator has constitutional rights which preclude his arrest by a policeman or special officer of a railroad. Then the Senator was released, and he caught the next train for Washington, agreeing to return to-day and stand trial.

Praises the Police.

The Senator thanked Commissioner Whittle and the policemen for their courteous treatment of him and assured them that, while he was indignant over being taken from the train, he could not complain of the action they took of the police. He talked interestingly to the police of the episode and, although it was easy to be seen that he was mad all through, he was amused at some of the incidents.

"I have eaten terrapin pie with Senator Gorman in Baltimore," he told Lieut. Cole, "but I never expected to ride in one of your auto patrols. That was my first ride in one of those things, and I did not take it as a distinguished honor."

"I had been in Philadelphia visiting my son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Parkinson, at the Hotel Walton, and was returning to Washington. "When the train pulled out from Wilmington I felt hungry and ordered a light lunch. I was made to wait about twenty minutes, and when the waiter passed me I called him, and asked him the reason of the delay. He made an impatient answer, and I felt called upon to resent his attitude toward me, which I did by slapping him in the face. "If he had committed the same offense toward a white man in Missouri, he might have fared worse."

"I contented myself with only one slap, however."

"I don't know what I said to the darkey, for when excited I do not remember what is said. And, anyway, there were no ladies present, and it doesn't make much difference."

"The negro left the car, and when we arrived at Wilmington the conductor of the train came to me and asked me about my trouble. I told him to ask the negro and go about his business."

"I was expecting something to happen, but did not expect my arrest in Baltimore. When we arrived here I was arrested at the instigation of the conductor, and brought here in the patrol wagon."

Right to Arrest Him.

"I don't see what right they have to arrest me in the State of Maryland, anyhow, as the offense was committed in Delaware. At any rate, I am not liable to arrest as long as Congress is in session."

"I could have resisted arrest, and nobody could have blamed me for it. "My daughter and her husband, who had visited me at Washington, are now on their way to Buffalo, and on this trip of mine I had accompanied them as far as Philadelphia. I hope they will not know that I had a sojourn, no matter how short, in a police station."

"I was arrested only once before in my life, and that was when I was about twenty-seven years of age. I got into trouble with a white man in my home city, and hit him with a stick. He came at me with a knife, and I hit him a good, strong blow on the jaw. Some bystander then parted us. I paid a fine that time."

The Senator explained to the policeman that he had about $200 in his pocket, but could furnish $300 bond if required. However, this was not necessary, and the commissioner said all that would be necessary was for him to agree to return for trial.

Arrives in Washington.

Senator Stone reached Washington from Baltimore this morning at 12:45 o'clock, going direct to his rooms at the Riggs House. When he reached the hotel, he was greeted by a party of newspaper men, who had been patiently awaiting his arrival for two hours. Among the party were several representatives of St. Louis, Chicago, and other Western newspapers.

As the Senator walked through the lobby he said with a broad smile: "Well, boys, I guess you are here to tender me a reception of sympathy in connection with my little escapade."

"A short time after we left Philadelphia one of the attendants of the car came around with a menu card and I ordered a cold soup and two soft-boiled eggs—that was about all I wanted, in fact, I did not really want that, but I knew I must eat something," said the Senator.

"When the waiter passed back through the lobby I felt he had any real good Scotch whiskey. He said they did have such an article in stock. I then told him to bring me a small quantity of Scotch whiskey in a small glass and with it a tumbler glass with cold water."

"The waiter went away and shortly returned with two small drinking glasses, the smallest I ever saw, one with about a tablespoonful of whiskey in it, and the other with about the same quantity of water. I mildly remonstrated and asked the waiter to give me a large glass. He did not seem to understand what a tumbler was. He was surly, but said nothing and left me. He came back soon with a tumbler glass with a lump of ice in it, but no water. I asked him why he did not bring the water. He left me, but made no explanation."

"After waiting for a long time and the negro not returning, I went to the water cooler and filled the glass, and returned to my seat and drank the whiskey. It was at this point that the other five or six men in the car were served their lunches. After all had finished and had commenced to smoke, and my lunch not having reached me, I got up and went to the end of the car. There I found the cook. I asked him why he had not served my lunch, and told him this was very poor service, and that I intended to report the matter to the railroad officials and see if the service could not be improved. The cook was all courtesy, and explained that my lunch had been ready some time, but that the waiter had failed to serve it. At this juncture the waiter came up and I asked him why my lunch had not been served. His reply was something that I do not remember at this time, but his manner of insolence and insulting spirit nettled me, and I slapped him in the face."

No Excitement.

"That is all there is to the assault. There was no excitement, the negro made no attempt to strike me, nor was it necessary for any one to interfere. Please state there were no ladies present in the car. The slapping took place in the State of Delaware."

"A short time after the affair the conductor of the buffet came up to me and in an insolent, overbearing, insulting manner and tone demanded of me to know what all this fuss was about. I told him I saw no disturbance, and asked him if he did. He then asked me if I slapped the negro waiter. I told him that I had.

"His reply was that I had no right to slap any one on that train. I told him if he persisted in his insolence he would get the same medicine I had given the negro. He left me with a threat that he would fix me."

"I thought when we reached Wilmington he would attempt to arrest me. He did not, but subsequent events showed he had telegraphed to Baltimore to have me arrested."

"I will leave the city to-day at noon, and shall in all probability take with me Senators Rayner, Bailey, and others as counsel, and when I get to Baltimore I shall have young Gorman defend me."

"I was the unwilling guest of the city of Baltimore in a manner unpleasant to me. I was shown a part of the city from the patrol automobile, and was the whole time insulted. If possible, I shall have over I shall personally take this matter up with the officials of the railroad, and see if they will permit their employees to mistreat and insult passengers as I did. If possible, I shall have both the negro waiter and the buffet car conductor removed from that public service."

MR. TUCKER REPLIES

Answers Attack Made on Him by Judge Mann.

DENIES THE SMITH LETTER

Declares He Has the Original in His Possession, and that It Is Signed "James Mann," and Not William Hodges Mann, as the Candidate Said in Warrenton Speech.

Special to The Washington Herald.

Richmond, Va., July 27.—Harry St. George Tucker, candidate for governor, in a statement to-day effectively answers the attack made upon him by his opponent, Judge William Hodges Mann, at Warrenton yesterday.

Mr. Tucker says, in part: "Referring to the Smith letter, which Judge Mann sought to explain by placing the burden of responsibility on his manager, Col. James Mann, I come to a sharp issue with Judge Mann. I deny in toto that he sent such a letter to John H. Smith. I deny that he ever signed such a letter, although who signed it in his Warrenton speech, signed, 'Very truly yours, William Hodges Mann.'"

Has the Original Letter. "I have the original letter in my possession. It coincides in every word and particular with the letter Judge Mann quotes. It is signed, 'Very truly, not "William Hodges Mann," but "James Mann."'

"This letter is dated Richmond, Va., July 12, 1909. Judge Mann was not in this city, I am informed, at that time, but was in Campbell County the day the Mahone letters were published, and he could not be reached, and yet he has declared that he wrote the above letter and signed it, sending it on the twelfth day of July."

"Judge Mann also says that his letter to Smith was written during his absence from the city; his name signed to it. Was the man who signed his name authorized to do it? If he was absent from the city, did he not sign it for him, James Mann, with full power to act for him, pledge for him his support to W. D. Smith?"

"Does Judge Mann repudiate the act of his manager? In this campaign, is Judge Mann doing the running and Col. James Mann the promising? If this be true in this case, how many hundreds of cases may there be throughout the Commonwealth? He says he referred to the support of Mr. Smith for the position of the superintendent this past spring, to which he has recently been elected, and not to the future, four years from now."

Will Apologize If Wrong. "If I have done Judge Mann an injustice about this I feel he is glad to apologize at once for it. The letter written to Judge Mann by John H. Smith, asking his support for W. D. Smith as superintendent of schools I have never seen. It is presumably in Judge Mann's possession."

"If Judge Mann will produce that letter and it show that he was asking for Judge Mann's support for W. D. Smith for superintendent of schools during the recent contest, and not his support when governor, I will be glad to apologize to the judge. John H. Smith informs me that he was asking for Judge Mann's support for W. D. Smith if he should be elected governor."

Tucker then goes on to read correspondence to prove his assertion.

RUNS HALF MILE TO ELOPE.

Frederick County Girl Flees with Pittsburg Sweetheart.

Special to The Washington Herald. Winchester, Va., July 27.—Telling some girl friends at a social gathering last night that she was going to a well in the yard to get a drink of water, Miss Nenah Whitacre, daughter of Turner A. Whitacre, a prominent resident of Frederick County, ran half a mile across country and met Maynard Baker, formerly of that section, but now of Pittsburg, who had a horse and buggy, and crept in the woods along the road to Berkeley Springs. When Mr. Whitacre heard an hour later that his daughter had eloped he gave chase, but was outwitted.

He learned at Berkeley Springs that the young couple had changed horses there, driven to Hancock, Md., and boarded a midnight train. Their destination being unknown, several attempts had been planned during the past year, but were frustrated by Miss Whitacre's relatives.

WASHINGTON HERALD BUREAU, 128 South Royal Street.

Alexandria, Va., July 27.—The streets and alleys of this city will be given a general cleaning up at once under the direction of the city engineer, special attention being paid to the outskirts. The foregoing action was decided upon at a meeting of the city council to-night, following a resolution offered by Councilman Snodden. Engineer Dunn will be in charge of the work in which he is now engaged and devote his time to having the general sanitation of the city put into better shape.

A bill of Samuel P. Fisher, corporation attorney, for $50 for legal services given in connection with the suit for the Washington-Southern Railway Company against the city, and a bill of N. S. Greenaway, clerk of the court, for court expenses, in connection with the case, for $30.57, making a total of $80.57, were passed.

Upon the recommendation of the public property committee the sum of $135 was appropriated for the purchase of ninety-eight additional file cases for the office of the clerk of the Corporation Court. Mr. Marshall explained that this number of cases would carry them over for a year or two to come.

Mr. Leadbeater asked that a bill of Mrs. Cornwell for $63.28 for food furnished a small pox patient, be again taken up for consideration. The chair ruled that it was lost when it was brought up for consideration May 21 last, and that it would have to be reintroduced. Councilman Usher gave notice that he would do so.

A resolution carrying with it an appropriation of $1,000 for laying a broken stone roadway and gutters on Alfred street, between Duke and Prince streets, was referred to the street committee.

Councilman Graves, by request, offered a communication from Charles E. Petty that he be paid $200 for loss of salary following injuries sustained at a fire at the Jameson Studio June 12, 1908. The chair ruled it out of order, it having been presented some time ago.

A resolution offered by Mr. Hellmuth, carrying with it an appropriation of $100 for painting the outside woodwork of the Relief truck fire house and repairing the sills, was passed.

The general laws and finance committee recommended that the new set of health laws recently vetoed by the mayor be re-committed. Its recommendation was adopted by the higher board and the lower board concurred in its action.

At an early hour this morning thieves robbed the saloon of Pluckett W. Harvey, at Oranoke and Patrick streets. They got between $15 and $20 in small change from the cash drawer, together with nine quarts of whisky and an old ring. An entrance was effected through a side window, which was raised. Policemen Young and Knight discovered the robbery and reported it to Mr. Harvey.

About noon to-day Chief Goods and Councilman Graves arrested the following six men on suspicion of knowing something of the robbery: John Williams, Joseph J. Carr, Philip Cornell, Harry Simms, Ellis Langford, and Arthur Brown. The police also recovered two full quarts of whisky and one empty quart bottle. The men will be given a hearing in the police court to-morrow morning.

Final plans for the primary, August 5, will be made at a meeting of the city Democratic committee at the Opera House cafe to-morrow night at 8 o'clock. This was the last day in which candidates desiring to submit their names for the Democratic city committee could do so. The names of the incumbents will be without opposition.

William Wiley, who was arrested last evening for throwing a rock through the window of a south-bound train over the Washington, Alexandria and Mount Vernon Electric Railway, was this morning given a hearing before Judge W. D. Burrell, Alexandria County, and held for the action of the grand jury. His bond was fixed in the sum of $1,000. It is understood Wiley is making arrangements to obtain a bondsman. His case will be heard at the September term of the County Court.

The following delegates to the State Republican convention, which will convene in Newport News, Va., to-morrow, left to-night: Joseph L. Crupper, J. A. Eggen, H. D. Robinson, H. B. Quinn, and Charles M. Hancock. The delegates go instructed.

Plans have been made by the Alexandria Light Infantry to go into camp at Colonial Beach August 1. The members of the company will use $150 of the State fund which has been allotted to them for that purpose, provided, however, it meets with the approbation of State headquarters.

Arrangements have been made for an important business meeting of Fitzgerald Council, No. 43, Knights of Columbus, at 8 o'clock to-morrow night at St. Mary's Hall.

DENOUNCE PARTY BETRAYAL.

Nebraska Republicans Praise Tariff Action of the State's Senators. Lincoln, Neb., July 27.—Five hundred delegates to the Nebraska Republican State convention unanimously indorsed the action of Senators Brown and Burkett in voting against the Aldrich tariff bill, which was denounced in speeches as a betrayal of the party pledge and faith, and called on President Taft to veto it. If not remedied according to his wishes, they wound up by telegraphing the tariff plank to Mr. Taft personally, along with a message commending him for his efforts to secure downward revision, and informing him that it is to the interest of the Republican party that it be so revised.

By common consent, the temperance issue was laid aside until next year.

MISTAKES WIFE FOR BURGLAR.

Advertising Artist of Boston Found Holding Dying Woman. Boston, July 27.—Constant fear that burglars were invading his home caused the accidental killing of Edith B. Pierce by her husband, Henry G. Pierce, as the couple lay in bed in their home at 27 Boylston street, Jamaica Plain, early this morning. Pierce, who is an advertising artist, was taken into custody by the police, but the court refused to grant a warrant for his arrest, and he was released from custody. The husband was found in the bedroom holding his dying wife in his arms when neighbors got into the house.

PATTEN AFTER ARMOUR.

Sale of Million of Bushels Simply a New Pit Campaign. Chicago, July 27.—Charles A. Patten, according to pit traders, came out in the open to-day as a big short seller of wheat, amounting probably from 3,000,000 to 5,000,000 bushels, and broke prices from 3 1/4 to 4 cents a bushel.

His brokers sold both September and December heavily, and the July price took a tumble of 4 cents a bushel in a short time because elevator people and receivers undertook to sell for that month against actual receipts. September wheat broke to 1.05 1/2, and December to 1.05 1/2 in the last hour.

"Patten is not selling this wheat because he is bearish," said a well-advised pit trader. "He is after the big line of wheat held by the Armour Grain Company."
